Mostly, sports give positive effect on person's health and mentality, but there is some exceptions. Extreme sports actually can ruin the health of a sportsman. So why are they keep doing their sport? Why can't they just stop?

So I want to say that every extreme sport can make the sportsman naturally addicted to it. That's not quite good but in my opinion, that's the most interesting part. It's always hard to overcome yourself but the feel that it gives to you is mind blowing. Such hard times can make an incredible person from you. Difficulties on the way to victories makes person's character stronger.

People that do extreme sports, really turn stronger physically and psychologically, but sometimes happens that those people break. Sometimes mentality of sportsman can't overcome the difficulties of trainings and they just give up, or they train a lot and turns out colder and stricter than they was before.

Sport can affect differently on a different people. Actually, that's the problem of a sportsman themselves. It all depends on them what kind of conclusions they will make according to their sportscarrier. It all depends on them.

To sum up, extreme sport is amazing way to build a strong personality.
