Today we will be discussing a controversial topic - video games.

Some people believe that computer games are better than life.

Why is that? Because those people never get to live through experiences shown in games, which seem more interesting than those that they have in real world. In games they can be anything, unlike in our world.

I don't agree with them. No game can ever convey the emotions you feel in real world, they are but emulations.

My advise is to not argue with them, instead, offer to help them overcome their addiction. Prove them wrong, show them how good life can be.
