WRITING

Hello, my name is Arseniy. I would like to state my opinion on why some people think video games are better than life.

Often people feel unsatisfied with their lives, so they ignore real life and replace any real experience with video games. Although it's easy to understand them, it's hard to agree with the idea of games being better than real life. It's immature to shut yourself in, instead of going out there and making a difference. You only have one life, there's no time to sit around and play games. Life can be hard, but that's alright.

In conclusion, I agree that some people prefer games to real life, but I don't believe they're right.
