WRITING

Nowadays computer games are very popular. There are so many different types of games for any interests. Everyone can find the game that would be apt to him or her. But sometimes people stop controlling the amount of time that they spend playing and they start to live in these games thinking that it is even better than life.

In my opinion life is so much better than computer games. Because we live only once and we can fill it with so many incredible memories and impressions. We can talk to amazing and kind people. And the most important thing in a real life is having friends and family who can make you life even better and happier.

I think that people who "live" in computer games try to hide there from the reality and try to create a perfect life, because they might have some difficulties or problems in the real life or they just have no power or motivation to keep going so they play games.

But some achievements or good events in life can give the person such an amazing satisfaction or another feeling that you will never get in the game.

In conclusion I'd like to say that computer games are not something terrible or awful. Everyone who wants obviously can play it but living there is absolutely the thing that I don't recommend to do.
