ANSWER SHEET

To kick things off, there are a lot of debates going on about advantages and disadvantages of living in a city. On the one hand, life in a big city means better opportunities for work and study, developing infrastructure, but on the other hand, — constant noise, polluted air and dangerous streets. This research intends to find out if life in a city is better than life in a country side.

It's common knowledge, that getting a degree and building a career is much easier in a city, than in a country side. However, life in a city can't replace nature's beauty: its breathtaking landscapes, huge mountains, green forests. Humanity can't live without it, because we are part of it.

Life in a country side is safe and calm, but without communication and news from the city, it can lead to a gap between the world and this person. If one ~~wants~~ <sup>doesn't</sup> accept modern world then it will be hard for them to socialise. That's why we should be connected to both a city and country side.

In conclusion, living in a city is not bad, because it has more advantages, than disadvantages. But to keep in touch with nature we need to travel to a country side. ~~our~~ <sup>200</sup> camp regularly, at least try to.
